(2) The receipted bill or voucher presented at the Treasury for payment of the advance should bear a certificate of the Deputy Commissioner to the effect that the necessary bonds have been executed and should be accompanied with the duly authenticated copy of the Government Order sanctioning the advance received by the officer drawing the advance. This copy should be attached to the voucher sent to this office in support of payment made. Receipts for payment of second instalments of house-building advances should bear a certificate of the Deputy Commissioner to the effect that he has satisfied himself that the first advance had been fully spent upon the building and the second instalment may be paid.

(3) In the case of advances to Establishments, arrangements will be made by the Head of the Office for recovering the advance in accordance with the rules. The voucher for payment of the advance should be countersigned by the Head of the Office who draws the salary of the officer receiving the advance before it is presented at the Treasury. Such countersignature is necessary to keep the Head of the Office informed of the advance drawn and to enable him to make the necessary deduction from salary drawn for the debtor. Bills of Gazetted Officers need not be countersigned as they will themselves arrange to make the deductions from their salary bills. Particulars as to the nature of the advance, the serial number of the instalment and the amount deducted should be clearly noted in their Salary Bills.
